

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT IN MARCH

DECLARE ACCIDENT SHOULD NOT RETARD AVIATION PROGRESS

Leaders Regret Air Tragedy That Dealt Blow To Industry

NEW YORK, April 3.—"Knute Rockne would have said: 'Carry on—let nothing stop the progress of aviation.'"

Captain "Eddie" Rickenbacker, famous American flying "ace" during the World War and now vice president of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation, made this assertion today in discussing the reaction of leaders in the aviation industry to the airplane crash which sent Rockne and seven others to their deaths. Rickenbacker said Rockne was "that kind of a true sportsman."

Other aviation leaders, like Rickenbacker, expressed profound regret that the accident had occurred but they were unanimous in the opinion that the American public which has steadily grown more "air-minded," would not be influenced to an appreciable degree against using airplanes in their travels.

Sherman M. Fairchild, president of the Fairchild Aviation Corporation, in an exclusive interview with International News Service, pointed out that in the past year air accidents have been reduced to a minimum and declared that the air transport companies are "using every known engineering and mechanical facility to bring about a further reduction." He said weather conditions were the only serious handicap yet to be conquered.

"The traveling public can be assured," said Fairchild, "that it is the aim of the air transport companies of the country to give the safest and finest service that can be obtained anywhere in the world."

Aviation, entering the spring of 1931 with prospects for passenger travel better than at any time in its existence, was dealt a blow by the death of Rockne and his companions. It was bad advertising. But the leaders of the industry are confident that the accident will not prove a setback. At the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, it was pointed out that in the last nine months there was only one other fatal accident on regular scheduled airplane lines in this country. In that accident, in California, a woman was killed.

Fairchild declared that all transportation industries are bound to have accidents. He didn't know of any that did not. He said any system run by human beings is not infallible. It was "unfortunate," he thought, that news of air accidents have more news value than news of accidents in other fields of endeavor.

The weather is responsible for more accidents than any other factor," Fairchild asserted. "However, accidents are becoming fewer and fewer. We hope to eventually make."

RAILROAD AND BUS LINES EVEN

Both Win Points In Senate Vote

COLUMBUS, O., April 3.—Bus companies and railroads had broken even today in the climax of a commercial war between the two divisions of the transportation business that for several weeks has required the close personal attention of nearly all members of the upper branch of the 89th general assembly.

Favoring the bus lines, the senate yesterday passed by a 21 to 5 vote the Gunsett bill, which, in its amended form, allows "continuous haulage" between bus companies to put an end to the necessity of frequent changes of cars now required.

Heeding the railroads' demand, however, the senate tacked on an amendment to deny bus lines the right to add or subtract equipment of any kind without first obtaining consent of the state public utilities commission.

A date in which the respective claims of bus lines and railroads to public patronage were sharply brought out preceded the vote.

DAUGHERTY FILES APPEAL IN CASE

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., April 3.—Charging trial errors, a petition seeking reversal of the conviction of Mal S. Daugherty, convicted former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank, was on file in the court of appeals here today.

Daugherty, who is a brother of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general in the administration of the late President Warren G. Harding, was found guilty by a jury recently of irregularities in connection with his operation of the Ohio State Bank.

Rome Observes Death Of Christ In Solemn Rites

ROME, April 3.—Pilgrims from many lands crowded the 365 churches of Rome today to commemorate the historical anniversary of the death of Christ, annually observed here by the Roman Catholic Church with a series of impressive rites that usher in the dawn of Good Friday and continue until last night.

Despite the economic crisis, which greatly reduced the number of Holy Week visitors, the influx of those anxious to worship at the various shrines here and of tourists eager to view the elaborate religious ceremonies was sufficiently heavy to fill all churches at an early hour.

Theatres and motion picture houses were closed in deference to Good Friday. The chimes of all religious edifices were stilled, reminding the capital of the seven hills of the significance of the day.

The Plaza in front of St. Peter's Cathedral was crowded with visitors. Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state officiated at the morning and afternoon services.

While the imposing edifices of world-wide fame drew immense throngs of worshippers, the hundreds of devout pilgrims well acquainted with the more secluded shrines of Rome offered prayers before altars hundreds of years old. The masses of these veteran visitors, as in former years, continued to be the modest little building opposite the Basilica of St. John Lateran.

Within its unpretentious confines is treasured the "Scala Santa," or holy staircase. It consists of a flight of twenty-eight marble steps taken from the ancient Jerusalem palace of Pontius Pilate. Tradition states that the footsteps of Christ were outlined in blood as He ascended these self-same stairs to appear for the last time before the Roman governor.

Brought to Rome in the year 326 by Empress Helena, mother of Emperor Constantine, it has now become a sacred object of Catholic worship. On Good Friday the devout pilgrims do penance by climbing the stairs on their knees, praying fervently. Afterwards, they are allowed a glimpse of the Holy of Holies, formerly the private chapel of the popes. It contains numerous precious Christian relics. Only a few persons are admitted at a time.

A few steps away from this shrine is another equally famous one which for centuries has treasured a large splinter of wood said to be part of the cross to which Christ was nailed on Mount Calvary.

Underneath this basilica is a chapel dedicated to Empress Helena. Its pavement is made of soil brought here from Calvary. A "procession of penitence," consisting of clergy and scores of Catholic organizations, filed past these sacred shrines for hours at a stretch.

Sunset is the signal for the "Via Crucis," a special series of sermons, prayers and chants commemorating Christ's last journey. The services end with the "three hours of agony," a ceremony mourning the death of Christ.

TWO CONVICTS INDICTED FOR MURDER IN OHIO PEN FIRE CASE

COLUMBUS, O., April 3.—Two convicts languishing in Franklin County jail here today biding their time for the next scene in a criminal drama which yesterday saw them indicted on two first-degree murder counts in connection with the disastrous Ohio penitentiary fire a year ago that cost the lives of 329 prisoners.

The indictments were returned against Clinton Grate, 31, of Dayton, O., and Hugh Gibson, alias Gibbons, 36, of Philadelphia. They are charged specifically with the deaths of Howard E. Brashear, Benjamin Scanlon and Robert Stone, all of Columbus and all of whom lost their lives in the prison conflagration.

Naming of the three fire victims in the indictments was for the sake of convenience and accessibility of witnesses when it becomes necessary to produce testimony in establishing the "corpus delicti" in the trial to follow.

Grate and Gibson were to be served with their indictments today. They are now in solitary confinement at the county jail. Their cells are located in different ranges and no communication is allowed between them.

Arraignment of the pair has been scheduled for Monday at 9 a. m. presumably before Judge Cecil J. Randall, who has been assigned to the county criminal bench for the April term.

Indictment of Grate and Gibson brought to a climax a year's investigation of the heinous conflagration a year ago. A note, or a "kite" as it is known in prison parlance, was responsible for the solution of the fire mystery.

The "kite," intercepted by prison officials as it was being taken by a "runner" from Grate to Gibson, bore the warning: "Keep your mouth shut."

With this information, prison, county and city officials began an investigation that finally ended with the confessions, according to County Prosecutor Donald J. Hoskins, of both Grate and Gibson.

The fire was started, the alleged confessions said, because the two men resented "building cells for more prisoners," and because they wished to thwart Warden P. E. Thomas' prison construction program. The two men were members of the prison construction gang.

Gibson was extremely nervous today as he sat alone in his cell at the county jail. He has frequently expressed the opinion that he will "burn" because of his statements to officials concerning the prison fire.

Grate, the younger of the pair, preserved an air of taciturnity. He appeared to be untroubled over what the future holds for him.

ARREST YOUTH IN MATRICIDE

NEW YORK, April 3.—"Officer, I want to surrender—I killed my mother."

Police did not believe the words of the pale, trembling young man but they went to the address he gave them. There they found Mrs. Barbara Forzell, 54, dead. A rope was around her neck. She had been strangled to death.

BETTER TIMES!

NEW YORK, April 3.—The apple man must go and in his departure business men today saw a distinct sign of improved conditions.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney announced apple vendors who bobbed up with bad business, after April 15 must confine their work to side streets and will not be permitted on Fifth Avenue, Broadway and other leading streets. City officials held that business has improved to the extent that apple vendors were a hindrance in the busiest sections of the city.

FORMER LEGION HEAD COMMUNITY DINNER SPEAKER THURSDAY

PEN FIRE SUSPECTS

Three convicts are said to have confessed to have participated in the cell block blaze at Ohio state penitentiary at Columbus, which consumed 322 convicts. Easter Monday 1930, according to reports from Columbus. The men are said to have set fire to the cell block because they objected to building cell blocks to house more convicts, but had no intention of escaping. First degree murder indictments are to be asked for Hugh Gibson of Cleveland, top; Jimmy Maloney of Cincinnati, O., below, and Clinton Grate, of Dayton, O. Maloney is alleged to have admitted carrying candles from the prison chapel but denies knowing for what purpose they were to be used.

ROCKNE RITES WILL BE HELD SATURDAY; FAMED PAY TRIBUTE

Monogram Club Guards Bier; Abandon Out- door Funeral

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 3.—Knute Rockne was back home today in Sunnyside, a silent host to his legion of friends.

In the attractively appointed living room of the stucco residence in Wayne St. they visited with Rock once again, still wondering why the referee had backed him up beyond the final goal line.

Intimates who had sat in the same room with him in mellow moments when—in reveries—Gipp, the four horsemen and others of his handiwork had streaked across imaginary yard lines on the carpet, paid their silent tribute, bowed their head at the master's portrait on the wall and then moved on into the chilly day.

Tomorrow afternoon they'll rally behind Rock once again—marching shoulder to shoulder—when the trail leads to Highland cemetery after requiem services are held at 3 o'clock in the ancient Church of the Sacred Heart on the campus.

Among the mourners were distinguished men, famous athletes and delegates, too, of King Haakon of Norway who bore tidings that Knute was to have been honored with knighthood by his native country.

How this Viking would have enjoyed that distinction, a royal member of the king's family.

Rock has kidded his close friends many times about King Haakon. He had said that some day he might bring a Notre Dame football eleven over there, and play the home team on skates.

Dapper Jimmy Walker, mayor of New York City, was expected during the day. Jimmy and Kay-nute

Ideals Of Organization Explained By Paul V. McNutt

Premier Mussolini, Italy's dictator, has been aptly called "the combined Lydia Pinkham and Henry Ford of the Old World," asserted Paul V. McNutt, Bloomington, Ind., past national commander of the American Legion and youthful dean of the University of Indiana law school, in his address at the second annual community banquet sponsored by Foody Post, American Legion, at the O. S. and S. O. Home dining room Thursday night.

Commenting upon the recent royal wedding in Italy, the nationally prominent Legionnaire said there were "five kings and five queens followed by 'the deuce.' "Who put out that deuce?" he asked.

Making a stirring plea for an adequate national defense, the speaker characterized a dictatorship as being just as foreign to representative government as the autocracy had been prior to the late war.

"Our court calendars are filled with the broken contracts of men and history is and always will be replete with the broken contracts of nations," he declared.

"The peace pact is admittedly a great step in the right direction toward permanent peace but you must remember that a treaty did not protect Belgium and a treaty will not protect the United States."

Surveying the record of achievements of the American Legion and explaining in detail the ambitious program undertaken by the executive men's organization, the former national commander said that "worth while accomplishment is the spirit which animates the Legion."

"The American Legion is the largest single organization of war veterans in the history of the world and its members are constantly striving to carry the ideals of their war time service into peace time service."

"The reason why we have been successful is because our program is founded upon service, particularly for the disabled veterans and needy children."

"Regardless of what we have accomplished in the past, our present task is to improve and expedite our service to the disabled veterans. They deserve adequate hospital facilities and as long as that need is apparent we will make a fight for it."

"It is for us to see to it that the veterans' bureau does not become entangled in red tape, but that it continues to serve the high purpose for which it was originally created."

Referring to the national welfare program of the Legion and the efforts being made in behalf of the needy and homeless children of veterans, the speaker paid a compliment to the O. S. and S. O. Home in Xenia. "Its fame has spread far and wide and before many months you will have a model home here."

"As long as we exist as an organization we shall keep our faith with them—the disabled veterans and the needy children."

"Americanism," he asserted, "is a word that has been bandied about in recent years. Our Boy Scout program is an elaborate

REVEALS SCHEDULE

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, announced today a priority schedule of construction for veterans' hospitals and national soldiers' homes. He said he had advanced the projects which would most readily and promptly furnish additional hospital and domiciliary facilities where they were most needed.

They are: Huntington, W. Va., expansion work, $150,000 and Chillicothe, Ohio, expansion and other improvements, $600,000.

San Francisco, April 3.—Alexander Pantages, theatrical manager, convicted of assaulting a 17-year old dancer, Eunice Pringle, today looked forward optimistically to the new trial, granted by the state supreme court here yesterday.

When informed of the decision, Pantages reiterated his innocence and stated his lawyers would introduce evidence to prove it conclusively.

The decision of the supreme court, reached by a verdict of 5 to 2, held that the prosecution misconducted objected to by Pantages attorneys "warrants the conclusion that the defendant was not lawfully convicted."

Miss Pringle described the decision as "terribly unjust" and declared herself ready to go through another trial and be in no fear of testimony against her character.

Miss Pringle said the decision to grant a new trial on the criminal charge would not affect her million dollar civil suit against Pantages.

HOLLYWOOD WILL PARADE

Film Stars Will Sparkle In New Attire In Easter Sunday Promenade

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., April 3.—Hollywood's film stars today revealed what they would wear for the Easter parade of fashionable filmland and the result was a dazzling array of smartness of style accentuating all that is pretty and newest.

Flocks of the stars in the main will emphasize the importance of frills and fur-bows for the coming season, although some of the beauties selected dresses of striking simplicity.

The "Easter bonnet" of course will be a much-obeyed part of the promenade. Hollywood's 1931 patterns will consist of all types and shapes with tailored models, softened by bandeaus, sharing popularity with dressy-flowered hats. There was no hint of financial depression as lovely ladies of Hollywood selected their Easter ensembles.

After the church services Hollywood's fashionables will radiate to the beach and to desert and mountain resorts. Carole Lombard, Julia Compton, Mary Brian and Carmen Barnes said they planned to start the day with attendance at the sunrise services in the Hollywood Bowl.

Miss Lombard's costume will be of printed metal cloth beneath a long black coat, while Miss Brian will wear a dress of dull blue printed chiffon on a cream background. Miss Compton and Miss Barnes will wear simple white frocks.

MAN OF MILLIONS

Here is Emilio Scala, who is closing his small confectionery shop in London, to go back to sunny Italy because a $2.50 investment in the Grand National Sweepstakes brought him $1,772,720 when Grakle finished first! Some forty relatives shared in Scala's ticket, however, so the winnings will be divided many ways.

KAYE DON SETS WORLD RECORD IN SPEED BOAT

Will Go Faster If Present Mark Is Broken, He Says

BUENOS AIRES, April 3.—Kaye Don, famed British racer who established a new world record for speed boats by traveling 103.73 miles an hour in Miss England II, asserted today he would attempt an even faster pace if others succeeded in bettering the new high mark.

"I dare say someone will soon attempt to shatter the record I set on the Parana River yesterday," he told International News Service before sailing for England.

"I'll be happy if anyone succeeds in doing it, for then I can show again what Miss England II is actually capable of doing."

Don's feat yesterday shattered the two-week-old record established by Gar Wood, American speed king, off Miami Beach.

Miss England II is the same boat that carried Major Sir Henry O. D. Segrave to his death last June. At that time a world record of ninety-eight miles an hour was set. It stood until Wood shattered it with a speed of about 102 miles an hour.

Don drove his boat to victory in a rough river. Slight accidents and unfavorable conditions had forced him to postpone the attempt, causing rumors that he would abandon his efforts to break the record.

PANTAGES GRANTED NEW TRIAL ON CHARGE OF ASSAULTING GIRL

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Alexander Pantages, theatrical manager, convicted of assaulting a 17-year old dancer, Eunice Pringle, today looked forward optimistically to the new trial, granted by the state supreme court here yesterday.

ORGANIZED RELIEF BEGINS RESTORING STRICKEN MANAGUA

Hunger And Epidemic Thwarted As America Rushes Help

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 3.—An organized relief machine under American auspices today assumed the gigantic task of dragging Managua out of the wreckage that followed in the wake of Tuesday's earthquake.

The expected arrival at Corinto of the U. S. S. Rochester, the hospital ship relief and additional physicians and nurses as well as food and medical supplies, assured the weary relief workers in the ravaged Nicaraguan capital that their efforts to ward off hunger and epidemic will prove successful.

With a dozen planes from the U. S. S. Lexington already piling in regular cargoes of medical provisions and food, and evacuating the badly injured on return trips, the medical staffs working tirelessly in the hot sun here found increasing assurance that an outbreak of pestilence would be prevented. Hundreds of the injured were shipped to Corinto and other points by train following the reopening of the line between here and that port.

The death toll remained as indefinite as ever, with no attempts made to identify the dead. Col. Frederick L. Bradman, commanding the marines, declared that as many as 2,000 persons may have been killed when the city collapsed. However, President Moncada and Colonel Matthews of the Nicaraguan National Guards believed the death toll would not exceed 1,000.

An estimate of the injured has not been attempted by any of the leading officials. Digging squads so far have taken approximately 700 bodies from the ruins, but a large section of the wrecked city points to be searched.

Common graves were prepared as hastily as possible for their disposal. Prevention of disease, it was pointed out, depends to a large extent on the speedy burial of the dead.

EXPANSION SEEN IN RESERVE DISTRICT REPORT INDICATES

Iron, Steel, And Auto Industries Help Produce Gain

CLEVELAND, April 3.—Although operations were much below normal, a further expansion of business was noted during March in the fourth Federal Reserve district, the monthly business review of the Federal Reserve Bank said today.

The improvement was chiefly of a seasonal nature in the district which embraces Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia, the report revealed.

Manufacturing activity in February and early March in the district appears to have been benefited to a greater extent than in the entire country, mostly because of the large amount of iron and steel produced locally and because of the importance to many concerns of increased activity in the automobile industry.

"Allowing for seasonal variations the automobile industry increased over 8 per cent in February and further improvements were attained in March, weekly production marks indicate," the report said. This trend was reflected in operations at auto parts factories in the central and northern parts of the district, the review noted.

Increase in automobile production had a favorable effect on the steel industry and the slight lag in operations apparent in February disappeared, according to the statement.

"Stimulated by an early Easter, activity at clothing and textile factories increased by more than the usual seasonal amount and employment at these concerns advanced five points in comparison with a five-year average increase of two per cent."

Shoe production expanded 16 per cent, considerably more than seasonally. Retail trade also was larger in February after allowing for the difference in the number of business days, it was said.

Operations in china and pottery concerns improved more than the usual amount, with employment increasing 16 per cent over the preceding month. The employment figure, however, was still 12 per cent below last year's improvement in the pottery industry was considerably greater than the average seasonal change of two per cent for the past five years. Buyers, the business review noted, are still ordering chiefly for immediate delivery and only enough to replenish depleted stocks.

"The improvement shown, however, was by no means general, weakness still being observed in several lines," the report stated. Among those industries declining in the past month were glass, coal, rubber and building.

"The agriculture situation is quite unfavorable, though recent rains have largely corrected the drought deficiencies which have existed for many months," the report said in conclusion.

PARTIES CONSIDER CONVENTION SITES WHILE CITIES BID

San Francisco Wants Democrats; Hoover Can Name Place

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Although the national political conventions are still fourteen months away, party leaders have begun to give some thought to where they are going to be held, and evidences are observed of the beginning of a scramble for them by various cities from coast to coast.

There probably will be a dozen cities bidding for the Republican and Democratic conventions.

San Francisco, which entertained its first major political convention in 1920, when the Democrats crossed the continent to nominate James M. Cox, is going to put in a determined bid this year for one of the meetings. Inquiry among Democratic leaders develops there is considerable early sentiment in favor of going back there, although the usual objections have been offered that the trip is too long and costly.

President Hoover can name the Republican meeting spot, if he wants to. It is a sort of presidential prerogative. Coolidge picked Cleveland in 1924. Whether Mr. Hoover will choose to exercise his prerogative next year remains to be seen.

There is some Republican sentiment in favor of an eastern seaboard site for 1932, and Atlantic City, with its great new convention hall, is being prominently mentioned by Cleveland and Kansas City are expected to be in the bidding again.

FORMER LEGION HEAD HEARD AT COMMUNITY BANQUET THURSDAY

one. More than 8,000 Legionnaires are acting as Scoutmasters and more than 3,000 posts are sponsoring Scout troops. Our Junior athletic program is no less comprehensive.

Touching upon immigration, the speaker declared "we must not admit to this country any more aliens than we can assimilate and teach to become responsible citizens. Their allegiance must be exclusive to this country because no nation can serve two masters and no nation can suffer a divided allegiance."

The speaker was introduced by V. G. Martin, charter member of Foody Post and "buddy" of McNutt, having served under him overseas. Martin described him thus: "He has been a leader; as a lawyer and an educator, he has led his profession; as a diplomat he has gained renown; as a soldier and a Legionnaire he has been accorded the highest honors the organization can bestow. He has made a habit of succeeding."

The banquet was attended by nearly 450 people and Captain C. L. Darlington, this city, a past state commander of the Legion, presided as toastmaster. He declared it was altogether fitting the banquet should take place at the Home because "the institution is an integral part of this community and is becoming more so all the time."

The welcoming address was given by Lt. Col. Milton D. Campbell, Cincinnati, chairman of the National child welfare committee of the Legion and to use his own expression, the "baby" member of the board of trustees of the Home here.

"The trustees," he said, "are truly proud of the Home at present. We are glad that the banquet is being held in our dining room here, our only regret being the hall is not more suitable for such an occasion. God willing—and also the finance committee—we will have a new dining hall by next year."

Mrs. George Lawrence, Columbus, president of the Ohio Legion auxiliary, also spoke, asserting "This gathering bespeaks the co-operation between the Legion and the citizens of Xenia." Dwelling upon the work of the auxiliary, Mrs. Lawrence extended greetings on behalf of the 15,000 members of the auxiliary in Ohio and spoke of the fact "we are the largest women's organization in the country, more than 500,000 strong. We follow the Legion in every activity on which it embarks but our work is primarily to help the disabled veterans, principally through the annual poppy sales."

Captain Darlington also introduced the following distinguished guests who were seated at the speaker's table:

Paul H. Creswell, Xenia, U. S. marshal for the Southern Ohio district; Paul Fuller, president of Foody Post; Robert Keoh, Dayton, chairman of the Ohio Legion membership committee; Captain Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the Home; John Deshine, Phillipsburg, a state department vice commander and head of the district which embraces Greene County; Peter DeWeese, Lima, grand chief de gare of the Ohio Forty and Eight Society, a branch of the Legion; George Lawrence, Columbus, editor-in-chief of the Ohio Legion newspaper; Mrs. Paul McNutt, who accompanied her husband to Xenia for the banquet; J. W. Brown and Robert Spahr, members of the G. A. R.; and Mrs. Guy Toms, president of the women's auxiliary of Foody Post.

The program opened with the invocation pronounced by Dr. B. R. McCellan, chaplain of Foody Post. Musical entertainment was provided by the O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band under the direction of H. E. Seall and by the popular Pennsylvania Railroad Rainbow Quartet. The famous quartet was heard in a number of selections and contributed much to the program. Playing of the national anthem by the band closed the program.

The menu for the banquet consisted of grapefruit, celery, olives, rolls, chicken and mushrooms creamed, served in pastry dishes, mashed potatoes, wax beans, apple salad, cheese straws, charlotte russe and coffee.

ter weather conditions. We are getting better flying instruments; already automatic pilots are being used experimentally and the weather reporting service is increasing its efficiency tremendously. Practically all transport airlines are now carrying two-way radios. "I think the entire aviation industry realizes it has a great responsibility in carrying a great load at an increased speed with the same safety that prevails in other means of transportation."

Aviation leaders, basing their calculations on statistics, say it is possible to average 4,000 miles of flying in the United States per accident. While that is higher than railroads, they declare, it is not much higher than the average forms of transportation the public thinks nothing of using—say the automobile, for example.

Fairchild expressed the opinion there is no need for making new laws governing commercial aeronautics with a view of tightening up regulations and providing additional safeguards for the protection of the public. He emphasized that the air transport companies are doing everything in their power—taking advantage of every invention—to make air travel safe. He saw no need of additional laws on the inspection of planes or the use of additional safety equipment, such as parachutes.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. SARAH J. CONKLIN

Mrs. Sarah Jane Conklin, 86, widow of William A. Conklin, died at her home 116 E. Second St., Friday morning at 4 o'clock. She had been in failing health several years but had been able to be up and about her home. She suffered a heart attack early Friday morning and died a short time later.

Mrs. Conklin was born in the Maple Corner neighborhood December 9, 1844, the daughter of Thomas B. and Mary Bootes Cummings. She spent her entire life in Xenia and vicinity and was a member of the First Reformed Church. A sister, Mrs. Martha Fudge, who made her home with Mrs. Conklin and a brother, John Cummings, Xenia, survive besides two granddaughters, Mrs. Sarah Fudge, Jamestown and Mrs. Dorothy DeVault, near New Burlington, and two great grandchildren. Mrs. Conklin's husband died ten years ago and two daughters, Mrs. Ida Peterson and Mrs. Minnie Beal, also preceded her in death.

Funeral services will be held at the home Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, followed by services at the First Reformed Church at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the home Sunday afternoon or evening.

were paid. Rock had conferred on Jimmy the title of "assistant coach" after he had sat on the bench during an Army game in New York.

Standing as honor guard in two hour shifts were members of the Monogram Club of Notre Dame. Marchy Schwartz and Frank Carideo formed one duo.

Mrs. Lewis Rockne, Rock's 72-year-old mother, sat near her son. Her daughters and close friends comforted her. At intervals she shared her grief with Bonnie, Knute's widow. Billy Knute Jr., Jean and Jack had not yet grasped the meaning of the situation.

Telegrams from all parts of the country continued to pour in. Floral tributes were being heaped high around the room.

When Mrs. Rockne arrived in South Bend last night from Florida she discussed final plans with the Rev. Charles O'Donnell, president of the university. She said it was her wish that Rock be taken home.

Suggestions that the body lie in state under the golden dome of Notre Dame on the campus, and that requiem mass be celebrated at an altar either in the stadium or the field house, were considered, but disapproved.

And so the plan is to hold the services in the vine-covered church where thousands of students have worshipped since 1871, and where Rock, too, had been a regular attendant during recent years.

The Rev. Michael Mulcaire, vice-president and chairman of the board of athletic control, will be in charge of the services. The Rev. Father Steiner and the Rev. Ray Murch will act as deacon and sub-deacon, respectively. Father O'Donnell will preach the sermon.

Pall bearers will be selected from members of the 1930 national champions. An honorary escort will not be named. Father O'Donnell said:

"Let us list all those who will attend as honorary pall bearers." While thousands are expected to crowd the campus tomorrow only 1,500 will be admitted to the church, and it is likely that admission will be by card only.

Meanwhile scores of coaches and former players were reported on their way to Notre Dame, Jimmy Phelan had started from Portland, Ore.; Charley Bachman from Florida; "Slip" Madigan from California; Harry Stuhldreher from Philadelphia; Elmer Layden from Pittsburgh and Don Miller from De-fiance, O. It is believed that by tomorrow practically every former coach and player will be here.

FESS COMING HOME

Eager to undertake his spring gardening, including the planting of more than 100 apple and other fruit trees, United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey W. Welsh, left Washington, D. C., Friday by motor for his home in Yellow Springs. He will return late next week to attend the Gridiron Club dinner April 11.

INSTANT RELIEF FROM ITCHING

Followed use of Resinol

"For years I had a breaking out on the back of my hand. I tried various salves and ointments, and had several X-Ray treatments, but nothing seemed to heal the disorder. One night when my hand was itching unusually badly, my wife bought me a jar of Resinol Ointment which I used and obtained instant relief. I do not hesitate to recommend Resinol to anyone." (Signed)—

Owen E. Bennett, Santa Ana, Cal. The quickness with which Resinol acts in relieving eczema, chafing, rashes, piles, sores, etc. is amazing. Why don't you try it? Use Resinol Soap also to keep your complexion always clear and smooth. At all drugists. Sample free. Write Resinol, Department 66, Baltimore, Md.

Who wouldn't lead a dog's life—that is, if one had a mistress as charming as the one in the above photo? She is Miss Anna Carley, the daughter of the socially prominent Mrs. King Carley, of New York, and is shown strolling in the garden of her Aiken, S. C., home.

ROCKNE'S BODY RETURNED HOME

Stoically attempting to bear up under their grief, Knute Rockne's two sons, Knute, Jr., 11, and William, 14, accompanied their father's body to South Bend, Ind., from Kansas City, Mo., where they are attending school, not very far from the spot where Rockne plunged to his death. Top photo shows them with Father Michael Mulcaire, vice president of Notre Dame University, who also made the journey to Rockne's home. Photo, below, shows the casket being loaded upon the train at Kansas City.

CAPONE FREED OF VAGRANCY

CHICAGO, April 3. — The vagrancy case against Scarface Al Capone was dismissed today by Judge Frank M. Padden in the felony court after prosecutors told the judge they were unable to find a single policeman in Chicago who could give evidence on which the state might base hope for a conviction.

The case had been continued until today after Sgt. Roy Van Herk testified he signed the complaint against Capone on "information and belief" and had no personal knowledge of the defendant. He said he signed at the direction of Judge John H. Lyle, recent mayoral aspirant, who launched a drive against "public enemies."

LUMBERTON

The congregation of the church gave a dinner in the basement of the church Sunday after the preaching service for the pastor the Rev. Wylie and family, who has resigned as minister on account of ill health.

The funeral of Hazel Marie Wical infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Wical held at the home Saturday afternoon was largely attended. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hempstead and little son of Belmont spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonald and daughter Olive Mae of Cincinnati spent the past week here visiting relatives and friends.

Sunday afternoon callers of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Michener and family were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lewis of Xenia and Mr. and Mrs. Frank James of Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Evert Saylor of Dayton, were guests Sunday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Smith and family.

Mr. Newton Upton and family have all been ill with the grip the past week.

Several from this place attended the senior class play in Jamestown Friday evening. The title of the play was "When the Clock Strikes Twelve." All played their parts well.

Mr. and Mrs. James Jones and family and Mr. and Mrs. Riley Jones and family attended the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Devoe of Bowersville Saturday evening.

Harry and Marguerite Ford are ill with the mumps.

A good size crowd attended the special services at the church Sunday evening. The pageant "Challenge of the Cross," was well given, and very impressive. Seven girls took part as follows: as Evangelist, Pauline Hollingsworth; as Disciples, Helen Stoops, Hazel Rector, Georgia Rector, Violet McCullough, Zora Jones and Ernestine Jones.

At the church, Sunday, April 5, Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock; F. M. Buckwalter, superintendent.

The weekly prayer meeting was held at the church Wednesday evening.

FUNERAL HELD FOR MRS. AGNES CLARK

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes C. Clark, 79, widow of James G. Clark, who died at her home in Bowersville early Wednesday morning, were held at the M. E. Church, Bowersville, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was made in Jamestown Cemetery.

The services were in charge of the Rev. C. A. Arthur, pastor of the Bowersville M. P. Church.

Mrs. Clark's death was due to a complication of diseases and infirmities of age. The Clark family formerly lived in Jamestown but later moved to Dayton and had resided in Bowersville only about nine months. Her husband died six years ago.

She is survived by four sons: William McCaleb, by a former marriage and Percy Clark, West Branch, Ia.; Harry R. Clark, Detroit, Mich., and Lester Clark, Bowersville, with whom she made her home. Two brothers, William Neff, Bowersville and Alphonso Neff, Xenia; four sisters, Mrs. Anna Dersch, Fairfield; Mrs. Margaret Volkenand, Alpha; Mrs. Laura Levalley, Xenia and Mrs. Lou Fix, Lexington, Va., also survive.

STUDENT HURT WHEN CAR IS OVERTURNED

Alex Stout, student at Wilberforce University, was among eight persons injured, not seriously, when a westbound Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern traction car overturned onto the National Highway, several miles west of Centerville, Ind., Thursday afternoon, blocking traffic on the highway for more than ten hours.

Stout, who is a junior and is taking a commercial course at Wilberforce, lives at 543 Drake St., Indianapolis, Ind., and was returning to his home to spend the Easter vacation when the traction car, traveling at high speed, leaped the rails, skidded across the highway and turned on its side. Six of the injured were passengers but none was believed to have been hurt seriously. All the passengers crawled out through the rear door of the car.

An investigation to determine what caused the traction to jump the rails was in progress Friday.

DIES WHEN VISITING SON IN CEDARVILLE

James W. Brown, 84, Oakwood, O., father of H. H. Brown, Cedarville druggist, died at his home on Main St., there Thursday morning at 7:30 o'clock. He had been visiting at his son's home and was stricken with a heart attack five days ago.

Besides his son, H. H. Brown, Cedarville, another son, Dr. Hugh Brown, Defiance, O., survives. His wife preceded him in death four years. The remains were shipped to Oakwood Friday morning and funeral services will be held there Monday morning. Burial will be made in a Defiance, O., cemetery.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day. But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth.—I Timothy, v. 5, 6.

ILLEGAL ALIEN RESIDENTS

The U. S. Department of Labor is getting after alien seamen who are said to have entered the country illegally. It is said that 100,000 of such men are in this country, whose laws they violated when they entered it. Also the labor department has increased its force, with the idea of deporting as many as possible of the 400,000 or more aliens of all occupations who are estimated to be living here illegally.

No sympathy need be felt for these people. They slipped across our borders, or wormed their way through our seaports knowing that they were breaking the immigration laws. A man who will break the laws to get into the country, is likely to keep on breaking them after he gets in. He is not a desirable citizen.

Many of them no doubt settle down and show themselves good workers. And yet such ones proved themselves at the start to be lawless people, and we have far too many of that type already.

Most of these people are taking jobs away from legal residents. Some portion of the unemployment problem would be solved if the whole 400,000 of them could be shipped back to the countries they came from. These people who succeeded in getting in here contrary to our laws, are altogether too slick for us. They would better go back to their former homes, and exercise this smartness in dealing with their own authorities, who understand their language and know how to handle them.

Our government will not be very much respected in other lands, if every year some tens or hundreds of thousands of people can be bootlegged over our boundaries. Sending a few hundred thousand of them back would have a wholesome effect in the countries these people come from. It would teach some folks that while Uncle Sam may be regarded as a very tolerant old bird, he is not to be trifled with beyond a certain point.

STEADYING BUSINESS

What creates the alternate inflation and deflation of business, the results of which have caused so much trouble for the past 18 months?

One thing seems certain, that there needs to be well balanced production in all lines. If the factories produce just the right amount of their products to supply the demand, and if the farms produce just the right amount to take care of their market, then practically everyone will have work. There will be no depressions, so long as this even balance of steady business keeps up.

But trouble comes when some elements of producers get over confident and they produce 25, 50 or 100 per cent more than the market can absorb. After that exaggerated production is turned out, the demand for those commodities slumps. The factories producing that stuff are forced to shut down. Many people are thrown out of work, they are unable to make their usual purchases. Thus unemployment spreads from factory to factory, and a business depression results.

The only way to stop such depressions, is to stop exaggerated production in times of prosperity. To accomplish that end, it would seem as if the managements of the leading industries should consult with each other with some freedom, to hold back tendencies to over production.

But under our anti-trust laws, there is a question if such consultation would be legal. The law seems to require each industry to go it alone, without making arrangements with its competitors to limit production. Which raises the question whether the anti-trust law may not do more harm than good in some particulars.

THE CHICKEN CALLERS

The University of Maine has been running a chicken calling contest. There have been hog and cow calling contests elsewhere, and some expert on domestic animals should inform us just what constitutes the difference between a good chicken and a good hog caller.

Astonishing statements are made as to the distance over which these various callers can make their voices heard. It goes to show that when you have anything to eat, your voice can be heard a long way. That applies to humans as well as to domestic animals. The children may not be able to hear you 50 yards away when you tell them to get off the grass, but if you call out that dinner is ready, they will hear you at ten times that distance.

FORECLOSURE SALES

One result of the industrial depression in some places has been a good many foreclosure sales. If it is a sad day for the family that had set out to buy a home, when it finds itself unable to make the payments agreed upon, and when the auction that results may not give the owner all the money he put into the property.

Much real estate has come on the market at low prices, which are probably lower than they will be for a long time. It is a wonderful time for people to find a permanent home. They not merely will save a part of their rent charge by taking up these bargains, but they should see their property advance in value.

Many people have lost their homes through attempting a more ambitious proposition than they were able to afford. If they had been content with smaller quarters, they could have made good on their payments, and held onto their property.

You can tell a hick by the way he grabs his wife's arm and steers her down the street, as if she were under arrest. A gentleman offers his arm, which his wife may take or not, as she pleases. The difference is that between chattel slavery and equality.

Could a cat fall 25,000 feet and escape with only a headache? A young woman did it the other day, with the aid of an airplane, whose engine stalled nearly five miles above the earth. Science is indeed wonderful.

Wonder if the inauguration of work on the Hoover dam makes Calvin Coolidge regret that he vetoed the Boulder dam bill of his day.

Still Tammany has been investigated so many times, that it is rather hard to be optimistic about the prospect for a permanent cleanup.

The row over the German-Austrian business understanding makes it pretty clear that if ever a United States of Europe is formed there will be a power of bickering among the states.

After dealing with congress for two years, President Hoover ought to be able to cope with the complaints of the Porto Ricans.

TWO FIELD MICE LOCK HORNS
"Red" Lewis, brushing the oyster cracker crumbs from his lap, assumes a perpendicular position at the dinner table of his host and calls "Bull" Dreiser a plagiarist. Later, the two illustrious detective slingers meet in an ante-room and Dreiser slaps Lewis twice on the countenance.

Lewis flushes redder than a ripe raspberry, shrugs—and that's that. Two days later:

Lewis says: "I am restrained by the law of libel from saying anything more about Dreiser." And a suggestion by The Pastor: Why doesn't Mr. Lewis go ahead and say it, and if Dreiser sues him, use the money he got for the Nobel Prize to satisfy the judgment?

Under the circumstances, to what nobler purpose could the Nobel Prize dough be devoted?

STILL ROOM FOR MORE

One out of every ten persons you meet on Broadway or Main St. was arrested last year for some law infraction.

CRIME DOESN'T PAY

When life begins to pall and the world seems more like a cabbage leaf than a rose petal, I sit down and read crime statistics.

Wading through a wad of them, the other day I learned that with an annual crime bill of more than eighteen thousand million ($18,000,000,000)—call it eighteen billion if you have a mind to—dollars a year, the average family pays $135 annually as its own special crime tax.

In New York City alone it is estimated that between $200,000,000 and $500,000,000 a year is levied in tribute by racketeers from almost every business. The racketeer bill for the rest of the country is figured conservatively at $13,000,000,000.

And this, despite the fact that our 10,000,000 Federal, State and local laws and ordinances are being augmented at the rate of 100,000 annually.

Our present total of statutes exceeds the combined laws of five great European nations.

Which would seem to bear out the contention that "The country is best governed that is least governed."

Superstition

Why is it thought to be unlucky to light three cigarettes with one match?

This superstition had its origin in the old Russian funeral service custom of lighting three altar candles from one taper. It was considered an act of impiety to make any other lights in groups of three. Ill luck was supposed to follow such an act.

Stradivarius

Who was Stradivarius?

Antonius Stradivarius was the most famous of the violin makers of the Cremonese school. He was born in 1644, in Cremona, Italy. He probably was apprenticed to Nicolo Amati, who at that time was the greatest of the Cremonese masters. His first instruments resembled those of Amati. When Amati died he left his wood, models and tools to his pupil. Stradivarius must have made approximately 2,000 violins, although comparatively few of these are in existence now. Thousands of copies have been made in the last century. Labels as well as the original design have been copied, usually without acknowledgment.

WALKING A MILE FOR A CAMEL

CHICAGO BUSINESS MEN MAY SWING ELECTION FOR BIG BILL'S RIVAL

Charles P. Stewart, on tour, sizes up the mayoralty campaign in Chicago, which has attracted nation-wide interest.

CHICAGO, April 1.—Chicago is concluding one of its most spectacular mayoralty campaigns. The whole nation is interested in the election, Tuesday, April 7, because of Big Bill Thompson's vivid personality.

Anton J. Cermak's principal asset, as Democratic candidate for mayor of Chicago, is the forest reserve created by him in the wilds of Cook county. Just as William Hale Thompson's principal asset as Republican candidate is the determination with which he has resisted King George's encroachments during the whole course of his series of terms in the mayoralty chair.

Chicago and Cook county being geographically, as I always have supposed, practically the same thing, I at first, as a transient in the Windy City, took the forest reserve publicity to be something of a joke. But supporters of President Cermak (president of the county board for many years, throughout which he was engaged in his afforestation activities) say it is no joke at all—it is a real forest; not a park, but a sure-enough primeval affair. Pictures of Tony, in half boots and a mackinaw, wandering through it, blazing his way from the city limits to the county line, are offered in substantiation of the claim that it is the genuine article.

Seemingly a forest is better raw material than a record of unyielding opposition to King George for a Chicago mayoralty candidate to campaign on; folk laugh (that is, the better class of folk do) at Mayor Thompson's King George talk, but they appear to take President Cermak's forest appeal seriously.

There is something dignified about a forest, and Tony is making a dignified campaign versus Big Bill's attempt to circus the whole thing, as usual.

It seems to have been sound tactics on President Cermak's part, too, to select the dignified method. When Big Bill launched his fight with the anthem, "Tony, Tony, where's your push cart at?" if his Democratic rival had tried to out-slang him in return, Bill simply would have swamped him. By referring to Bill merely as "his honor the mayor," Tony naturally makes the "push cart" stuff sound pretty cheap and vulgar. Indeed, Bill evidently realizes it, for he shows signs of an effort to be dignified himself, which shifts the fashion of the encounter from Bill's favorite style, to Tony's favorite style.

Tony, I infer from talks I have had with Chicago business men in good standing, rates pretty well with that crowd, and its support counts—is quite likely to count decisively, I would judge.

It is easy to understand why. The Cermak presidency of the Cook county board has been financially a capable one, from all indications, taxes being kept within reason, the bookkeeping ship-shape and administrative details (the volume of them is such that some people class the job as more important than the governor's) efficiently run.

As a vote catcher, however, Tony is not so colorful a character as Big Bill, which doubtless explains the lagging of the forest reserve item into the ensemble—with its rabbits and squirrels, its woodchucks and its twittering birds and all those picturesque accessories.

Chicago's "uplift" element does not approve of Tony so highly.

The "uplifters" issued a manifesto the other day, saying the idea of a change from Big Bill to his Bohemian-born (though Tony was brought to this country when he was only a year old) opponent, struck them as a lot like jumping from the frying pan into the fire. Their chief complaint was that Tony always has been a wet and did not use the country's authority to prevent people from having a good time even in pre-prohibition days.

As against this, the Cermak-ites have devoted much publicity to emphasizing how extremely domestic Tony has been all his lifetime, which no doubt is true enough. He has the look of a contented, kindly family man—who probably has consumed considerable beer in his day.

I can visualize Tony as a forest ranger, but darned if I can visualize Big Bill as a cowboy, which he is advertised as having been in his youth.

It certainly would crack the back of any cow pony I ever saw to try to carry his weight. He must have been slimmer once, of course, but if my opinion of horseflesh is good for anything, he would need a perch on to ride range on now. Bill is impressive, nevertheless. His friends lay great stress on that. They point out that a "world's fair mayor" ought to look the part.

In that respect it can hardly be denied that Bill's qualifications are superior to Tony's. Tony is pudgy. Bill, while no sylph, is majestic. He is not exactly refined looking, but he has mass and bulk. As the foreground for a lot of world's fair architecture, photographed, say, from an airplane, he would give a fine effect.

No Scientific Proof

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The effect of meat on the body was discussed in this column a few months ago when some new work on the subject was reported. Since then a hot debate occasioned in part by the very report we discussed has been shaking certain portions of the medical world. Since it is a matter of immediate concern to a number of people, I will attempt to summarize the points made, without prejudice to either side.

The basis of the controversy is the widespread and popular belief that meat is harmful to the body and that man is naturally a vegetable and fruit-eating animal. In spite of the wide acceptance of this view there is no scientific proof of it. What the modern investigators of the subject have tried to do is to show by experiment that either meat is or is not harmful.

The result, unfortunately, is that one large group of honest and careful investigators has concluded from their work that meat is harmful, while an equal or even larger group of equally honest and careful investigators has concluded that meat in large quantities does no harm whatever.

And there are even some who believe that meat is a necessary article of diet. Still others, a small group, who think it can be used as an exclusive diet.

The difficulty of investigation is that groups of people who eat nothing but meat and groups of people who eat nothing but vegetables—for purposes of comparison—are not easy to find. Most people on earth quite properly, live on a mixed diet.

Animals come to mind as examples. Somebody in discussing it the other day pointed to the elephant as an example of a vegetarian possessing longevity. But immediately somebody else pointed to the crocodile as an example of a meat eater who also lives a long time. Meat eating dogs live long, though vegetable eating rabbits, I think you are. Animals, anyway, cannot be taken as exact standards for men in this respect.

The nearest we have to an exclusively meat eating race is the Eskimo. Thomas, in an article "The Health of a Carnivore Race," has reported that they show no more high blood pressure or Bright's disease than other races.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
W.: "I have been given some longings of a person who died of cancer. Is there any danger, from their use, of contracting the disease?"
Answer: The answer can be quite positive in the negative.

M., Warrensburg, N. Y.: "Is there any help for a person who is sterile? It means my whole life."
Answer: Many treatments of sterility, both in men and women, are known and practiced by reputable physicians. The treatment must be adjusted to the individual case. Advertising physicians and those who announce on the radio should be avoided.

Learn To Smile As Hubby Flirts

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"If you were the wife of a man, easily infatuated by other women, who corresponds with several girls at one time and goes to see them whenever he can possibly think up an alibi, or else has them come to see him, what would you do?"
"When I talk to him and try to make him realize the wrong he is doing, he denies everything, and says I am nagging him to death. He is killing my soul. The main reason I endure it is for the sake of the children. They would be the ones to suffer most from a separation."

"We have a fairly comfortable home, two adorable children. I love my husband more than life itself. Still he persists in going with other women. He tells them that we are on the verge of a separation, that we are incompatible, that I do not understand him, that I quarrel and nag him constantly."

"He is now going with two young girls that I know personally. One he tells he is going to get a divorce and one he tells he is not living with me. My heart is broken. What shall I do?"

I don't know what I would do if I had a husband who was like yours. One never knows what one will do in a certain situation until the time comes. I might tell you what I consider wise to do in the circumstances, however.

For one thing, every husband has certain faults. So has his wife, as a matter of fact, but we're talking about husbands. Some men can't make a living to save their souls, or make such a meager one that their families are always on the brink of starvation.

Some have devilish tempers or tantrums or drink to excess or refuse to budge after they get home from work, or take violent dislikes to all wife's friends and relatives and won't have them around.

And then there is the man who, like your husband, gets a big kick out of making love to every female within range and in thinking that his friends are in love with him. He strangles them along with the old familiar line: His wife doesn't understand him; they are on the verge of a separation or he doesn't really live with her, just keeps the home going for the sake of the children. The interest and sympathy he evokes in yearning and inexperienced feminine hearts is a sop to his inordinate vanity.

And you, the wife, add to his enjoyment by getting all hot and bothered, "breaking your heart" over his affairs—which don't mean a thing but vanity.

The wise wife learns to smile—a bit sardonically, I'll admit—such a man. If she loves him, as you say you do, she puts up with them because she knows that he always comes back to her in the end and needs her—the girl who really understands no more than he says. She learns not to nag and to view the procession of "victims" with a more or less humorous eye. He might be a bear, she thinks, or a gambler or a criminal and really she prefers a flirt bad as that type of person is to endure.

And there is safety in numbers, you know. Be glad he has more than one lady friend at a time.

BASHFUL TOM: Make up your mind to overcome your bashfulness by thinking more of others than of yourself, Tom. You can take a dancing lesson or two from a professional teacher if you can't get the girls to teach you. If you like a certain girl and want to get acquainted, find someone who knows her to introduce you; or, if she is a schoolmate, speak to her without an introduction. And if you don't at first get over your bashfulness, don't get discouraged, try, try, try again.

DISGUSTED SUSY: If standing up for yourself is what the boy friend needs, give him a piece of your mind every so often, Susy, if you want to keep him interested. Maybe if you showed more spunk and made him apologize for his unkind remarks he wouldn't feel so free to make them.

Dull Optics Won't Win Males

By GLADYS GLAD

What a dangerous place for perennial bachelors this world would be if we females all had eyes as alluringly beautiful as those of Marlene Dietrich, as enchantingly lovely as those of Claudette Colbert. But I'm afraid that said bachelors will find it a simple matter to continue their foot-loose and fancy-free existences without fear of being snared, unless we females learn to take better care of our optics. For so many of us at low puffs and circles to mar the perfect loveliness of our eyes.

Nine times out of ten, it's the damsel with the wicked orbs who has the longest list of names in her date book. And ten times out of ten, it's the perfectly healthy damsel who possesses those wicked orbs. For eye beauty is primarily dependent on health.

Puffs and dark circles under the eyes usually result from lack of sleep, eye-strain or ill-health. The first thing to be done in eradicating them is to discover the exact cause, and to correct it. If you don't correct the basic cause of the puffs or circles, you can apply your creams and lighteners till the cows come home, but it won't get you anywhere.

Every woman should obtain at least eight hours of sleep nightly. It is weariness and fatigue that make the eyes look old and tired. Rest will do more to make your look bright and young again than anything else.

Again, too great or too constant a strain should not be placed upon the eyes. If your daily occupation requires concentration, rest your eyes frequently during the day. Retire your eyes each evening after you've done your daily stint. Use hot and cold compresses alternately on them. Or lie down for ten minutes and lay pads of cotton moistened with cold water of witch hazel over your eyes. If you do obtain sufficient sleep each night, and you do not unduly strain your eyes, you should suit a competent physician. Kidney trouble, heart trouble, and other internal disorders may cause the appearance of the puffs or dark circles. And such conditions require a physician's treatment.

When the basic cause of the puffs and dark circles has been corrected, you may expect results from your various cosmetic preparations—and not one minute before!

HE FOUND TIME FOR SPORTS AND TRIED FOR THE FOOTBALL AND TRACK TEAMS

Speculation is rife as to who will be the new man at the wheel in the American League, following the recent untimely demise of Ernest Sargent Barnard, president, only a few hours before the death of Byron Bancroft Johnson, pioneer of the circuit, the man who turned a dream into a reality and served at the head of the league for the first twenty-seven years it had been in the field.

Johnson left a monument in baseball that will always survive. He conceived the idea of a second major league in the '90s, but it was some time before he could put it into effect. His chance came when he left the sports editor's desk of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette to become president of the Western League.

The circuit soon changed its name to the American League and in 1901 it expanded to Eastern cities and came out as an avowed rival to the National League.

A baseball war followed and the American League was successful in that it was finally recognized by the National League. A treaty was signed and the two major leagues have since been at peace, the annual World's Series, profitable to both circuits, cementing their friendship.

It took a long time for the great constructor of baseball to bring this about. Had he not been all backbone, he could never have carried on this fight. Disappointments and periods of adversity were many, but Johnson, a fighter to his finger tips, never once faltered. He lived on Pullman's, they say, and popped up here and there, always settling some bad local condition that threatened to engulf the league. He finally won and under his direction the new circuit prospered to a degree that exceeded his expectations. The dream of the sports editor of the gay or mauve '90s came true.

The late Mr. Barnard, who succeeded Johnson as president of the league when the latter retired in 1927 to enjoy well deserved rest and contentment, was a graduate of Otterbein College and while there he showed a pronounced leaning toward sports. He organized its first football team and coached it during his undergraduate days.

Mr. Barnard's idea of football was rather primitive. Nobody else in college knew much about it, so he purchased a rule book, completely mastered the rules of the game and set about coaching Otterbein, which under his tutelage proved good enough to defeat Ohio State University.

After graduation he received his baptism in baseball when he became sports editor of the Columbus Dispatch. He helped organize the Columbus club of the old Western League and when Columbus withdrew from that league in 1903, Mr. Barnard quit to become assistant secretary of the Cleveland club.

At that time he saw very few baseball games, business details keeping him chained to his chair in the office. On the day Addie Joss pitched his famous game in which he did not allow an opponent to reach first base, one of the employees rushed to him.

"Mr. Barnard, come down," he said. "Old Addie is making history. He has not allowed a hit."

"Can't do it. There's work to be done," was his reply.

SKATING CHAMPION TO BE DETERMINED

An elimination contest to determine Xenia's championship skating team over a two-mile route will be launched Friday night this week at former Sheriff Morris Sharp's indoor skating pavilion on the Springfield Pike.

Announcement was made that thirty-four local skaters, divided into seventeen teams, have entered the contest, and races are scheduled for every Friday night. During the winter months the skating rink has been open only on Friday and Sunday nights, but the proprietor expects to shortly open it up every evening of the week.

Rockne, like all red-blooded American boys, had his athletic heroes. A thorough-going Chicagoan, his baseball idols included Frank Chance, the "Peerless Leader" of the Chicago Cubs; Big Ed Walsh, then the Chicago White Sox star pitcher, but probably most of all, Walter Eckersall, the famous "Eckie" who sprang from Chicago high school football stardom to brilliance on the Big Ten gridiron.

The quick-witted, nimble play of the famous University of Chicago quarterback stirred the admiration of the youthful Knute. Here was genius, brain triumphing over brawn. Being physically small himself, Rockne was thrilled watching Eckie outsmart the brawny boys of opposing elevens. Football must be a game for smart fellows as well as beefy ones, Knute figured.

Came Rockne's late teens and a decision to obtain a college education. He rather leaned toward the University of Illinois, the big state school down in Champagne. But two of Rock's friends were planning to go to the University of Notre Dame, a small school somewhere in Indiana. They wanted Knute to go along.

It was a hard decision for Rockne to make. Most boys would have gone on to the big school. But not Rockne. Friends were friends, and he decided to stick with his pals. He borrowed $45 and took the train for South Bend.

At Notre Dame Rockne plunged into the study of chemistry. It was his ambition to become proficient in this science and he determined to know all there was about it. Though he had to work his way through school, Rock found time for athletics. He came out for football.

Tomorrow: Forward Pass—Dorais to Rockne!

RAIN MAY POSTPONE FIRST BALL GAME

Indications were Friday that the ill-fitting baseball game of the season between the Antioch College and Wilberforce University nines, scheduled for Saturday afternoon on the Wilberforce diamond, may or necessity be postponed, if not because of rain, at least on account of wet grounds. The game, if played, will be the first for both Wilberforce and for Antioch's "B" division team, as well as the initial diamond engagement of the current season in this locality.

MEET THE MANAGER

BY JACK SORDS

Bill McKeechne, the man who gets fired for being successful, need have little worries about his job this year. Bill is bossing the Boston Braves again and the Bean Eaters show few signs of becoming potential pennant winners.

McKeechne's first pennant winner was the Pittsburgh club which clicked under his management in 1925. The next season he was out of a job but not for long. In 1928 Bill assumed the reins of the St. Louis Cardinals and plotted that club to a flag. He was shipped down the river to Rochester the following season.

Yanked back in the closing days of the 1929 race to replace Billy Southworth at the helm of the Red Bird machine, McKeechne quit and announced his retirement from baseball. He planned to enter politics. However, the Boston Braves asked him to guide their destiny, so Bill is back in harness once more.

McKeechne, born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 7, 1887. He played with various minor league clubs, Pittsburgh and the New York Americans until 1914 when he jumped to the Indianapolis Federal league team.

Following the surrender of the Federal league, Bill drifted to the St. Louis Americans, the New York Nationals, Cincinnati and then Pittsburgh again.

"Hello Folks!"

"As I've often told you over the radio—if you want exceptional success with your baby chicks, feed them Tuxedo Starting and Growing Allmash.

"My, how chicks thrive on Tuxedo! This marvelous mash builds bone and blood; flesh and feathers; and it brings maturing weeks sooner. Cockerels go to market with added weight—pullets start laying early—both mean extra money in your pocket.

"The Tuxedo formula—that's the secret! Grains, buttermilk, pure cane molasses—and Cop Liver Oil, with the Vitamin A stabilized by our exclusive process!

"Tuxedo is sold by the best dealers—and they'll give you real service. The prices are right, too. I wish you'd try Tuxedo this Spring. Thank you, folks!"

FINED FOR ASSAULT
Pleading guilty to assault, Leroy Everett, 38, colored, 430 E. Third St., was fined $10 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Friday morning.

Easter Services To Fill The Air All Day Sunday

By MILDRED MASON
CHRIST'S resurrection from the grave will be the theme of a majority of programs on the air Easter Sunday, starting with the broadcast of Easter sunrise services from Washington, D. C. at 7:30 a. m. The sunrise service will be broadcast direct from Walter Reed General Hospital. Army chaplains will speak briefly and music will be furnished by the U. S. army band. This program will not be available through Cincinnati stations.

Easter programs will be heard throughout the day and possibly the outstanding program will be the appearance of Lily Pons, youthful French singer, who has taken the opera world by storm. She will be heard as guest artist on the RCA-Victor Hour from 7:30 to 8 p. m. It is less than three months since Miss Pons made her appearance at the New York Metropolitan Opera House and in a single night became famous. Her program will be heard over an NBC network through station WSAI, Cincinnati.

Another outstanding program listed for Easter Sunday is the fourth and concluding broadcast of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. Easter numbers will be presented by the orchestra and the program will be carried over the NBC network, through station WCKY, Covington, from 5 to 6 o'clock.

Other programs appropriate to Easter will be heard throughout the day.

Labor Secretary On Air
Reasons for President Hoover's pocket veto of the Wagner unemployment bill will be explained Saturday by Secretary of Labor William N. Doak in an address in the National Radio Forum over the CBS network. The program will be carried by station WKRC, Cincinnati, at 9:30 p. m. Doak will explain plans for expansion and strengthening the U. S. employment bureau of the labor department, decided upon following the

LILY PONS

President's adverse action on the Wagner bill and expected by him to outdo plans proposed in that bill.

Gene Austin In Series
Gene Austin, popular recording artist, will be heard over the NBC network twice weekly beginning Saturday. He will be heard Saturday evenings at 7 o'clock and Tuesday nights at 10:45 o'clock. Austin sings sentimental songs which have a wide and lasting appeal and his rise as a singer has been rapid. The programs, however, will not be available through Cincinnati stations but can be heard on other stations associated with the NBC network.

Napoleon Bonaparte, "the little corporal," who rose to be one of the world's most tremendous figures, must face trial for murder. This will be the second of the series "Famous Trials of History," over the NBC network on Sunday evenings. Arthur Garfield Hays, distinguished leader of the New York bar, will prosecute him and Dudley Field Malone, former assistant secretary of state and prominent lawyer, will defend Napoleon. The same distinguished jury that participated in the trial of Benedict Arnold last week will pass on Napoleon's guilt. Station WSAI, Cincinnati, will carry the program beginning at 10:15 p. m.

He Is Risen

If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above.—Colossians 3:1

THE great Easter truth is not that we are to live newly after death—that is not the great thing—but that we are to be new here and now by the power of the resurrection; not so much that we are to live forever as that we are to, and may, live nobly now because we are to live forever.

—Phillips Brooks.

Life Story of Mayor James J. Walker of New York

WALKER'S SHOW A GOOD ONE, BUT FOLK COMPLAIN

Sketched by R. J. SCOTT

WHEN "THE HEADACHES" of the city hall got too bad, Jimmy Walker takes a vacation.

ABROAD, Walker won European hearts by his wit and charm.

HIS HONOR cycling in Bermuda.

IN VENICE he praised a dinner by saying: "Tis is the best meal I have ever drunk."

HE WENT to Palm Springs, Cal., to get relief from his most severe headache.

(This is the fifth of a series of stories on the life of Mayor Walker.)

By HOWARD P. JONES
Central Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, April 3.—No matter how good the show is, folks kick if the price of admission is too high.

But Jimmy Walker can't be worried with box office matters. He is mayor of a city which spends a million and a half dollars every day in the year, he is responsible for the administration of that city. That's too big a subject to wisecrack about—he goes no farther than to speak of "the headaches" of the city hall. And when the headaches get too bad—he takes a vacation.

Excellent Ambassador
With the exception of "Big Bill" Thompson of Chicago, whose presence in his own office is reported to cause real excitement, Jimmy Walker is probably the "traveling" mayor in the country.

To do him justice, let it be said that he is an excellent "ambassador." Abroad, he won European hearts by his wit and charm wherever he went. This story is told, of his Paris visit. Asked how he seemed to know what people were saying, even though he did not understand French, his quick response had a touch of inspiration in it.

"It's not hard to understand the French people if you have an ear for music," he replied.

His wisecracks, of course, were not missing. In Venice he praised a dinner by saying:

"This is the best meal I have ever drunk."

Meanwhile New York taxes were rising and there were subterranean rumblings of rackets and graft galore.

Since his term in office he has been—mention a few—to London, Paris, Berlin and San Francisco, to Bermuda (several times), Palm Beach (several times), and Canada, and he recently went to California to get relief from the most severe "headache" he has ever had, in the bright sunshine of the Mojave desert.

While the Theater Burns—
For Jimmy Walker strangely resembles a comedian who keeps an audience laughing while the theater is burning.

There are plaudits no longer. A queer tenseness is coming over the crowd. Shouts have begun that something's wrong, and a stampede is imminent. The comedian might stay and help handle the crowd. He is no coward. But no. He has been funny so long he feels to realize the seriousness of the situation. He makes a final wisecrack and leaves the stage.

(Final dispatch tomorrow).

FINE TRUCK DRIVER ON DRIVING CHARGE

Changing a plea of not guilty to guilty to a reckless driving charge, Robert Craig, Xenia, was fined $25 and costs by Judge S. C. Wright, Wednesday.

The truck driven by Craig, which figured in a minor collision, was towed by Harold McCoy, near Xenia, and since it bore no license plates an affidavit was filed against McCoy, charging him with permitting operation of a motor vehicle not equipped with license.

Arraigned on the charge McCoy refused to plead so Judge Wright entered a not guilty plea in his behalf and following a hearing Wednesday took the case under advisement.

RUN-AWAY CAUGHT

A 14-year-old youth who gave his name as Carl Hayes, Springfield, spent Thursday night in a cell at police headquarters, awaiting the arrival of Clark County juvenile court authorities. After "humping" a ride to Xenia, the boy was "dropped off" at the police station.

LOVE, PREFERRED

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Dad's Girl," "Joretta," Etc.

Copyright 1931, Central Press Association

READ THIS FIRST:

Demure, poised, practical, industrious Mary Vaughn is private secretary to Ronald K. Foster, a prominent investment banker of Wall Street. Her busy life has afforded her little time for pleasure, for she has been the support of the family since her father's death four years before. There are her mother, Tim and Ted, the ten-year-old calamity twins, and Bonni, who is only two years younger than Mary; but she had been the baby of the family for ten years, and the beauty, as well as Bonnie never could be depended upon to help with the family finances, and Mary cannot remember the time when she did not have to take care of Bonnie and give her the best of everything. Bonnie abhors work, and makes it plain to everyone that she is not going to slave all her days for a meager living.

Mary commutes every day from over in New Jersey, and her work has been her world until debonaire Dick Baldwin, the new wholesale man for another firm in "the street," and a former football star, began to take her out. He asks her to a dance at the University club, and five minutes afterward Foster asks her to work late that evening. She tells Dick she cannot go with him and resumes her work. When she leaves the office that night, weary and burdened with disappointment, Mary finds Dick awaiting her outside.

He insists upon driving her home. He is just leaving with a new boy friend, and has "borrowed" Mary's new dress, which she refuses to give up to Mary.

Mary wears her old dress to the club dance and has a wonderful time. Bonnie, coming in later, opines that her party was not "so hot," and tells Mary that her dress is ruined because someone spilled punch on it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 4
Only vivacious and redundant youth like Mary's could have risen three hours later to make that tedious, exhausting journey to the office via train, ferry and subway, to give her mind to exacting detail through eight long hours, and appear as fresh and clearheaded as if she had had her full quota of rest.

That is why youth is taking the world by the horns and forcing it to accept the fact that the younger generation can keep the pace with the new age of speed and intense living. Blundering, impulsive, alert youth holds the margin against the lassitude of experienced age. Burn the candle at both ends may soon exhaust the wick, but it is all the brighter while it burns. And there always is new youth to replace that which is burned out.

Dick telephone Mary at eleven o'clock.

"You sure made a hit with the bunch last night, Mary. They want you to go up to New Haven next Saturday for the Princeton-Yale game. Of course, I want you, too. Ain't you kinda glad?"

"Am I kinda glad?" she laughed joyously. "I'd love it, Dick. What time?"

"Oh, we can start early and have dinner at some roadhouse, all of us. I'll be around about nine. How are you after the big night?"

"Couldn't be better," blithely.

"No, you wouldn't know, Mr. Frazier," she said gently.

"That's you, Mary," he approved. "Well, I'll be seeing you on Saturday. Have to run down to Washington tonight. Be good to yourself."

At two o'clock the operator announced Mr. Frazier. Martin Frazier was one of the few really big customers of Foster's, who came to the office in person, and more than quite often. Mary knew why. So did Foster; but Frazier was worth humoring, whatever he chose to do.

Very often he did not see Foster at all. He merely got as far as Mary's office, and there he stayed until she was obliged to dismiss him.

If she knew in advance that he was coming, she always arranged an important appointment to follow discreetly soon after his arrival.

He always began with business—ended with his personal interest in Mary. When Mary bewailed the fact that she was plain, she never stopped to ask herself why she had so many admirers, because few of them ever had in her. Yet she was obliged to be nice to him in the office. Evidently he continued with the campaign to win Mary over as if he believed that, eventually, nothing could resist him. It seemed that nothing in the world had resisted him—except Mary.

He came in with his cane on his arm and gallantly bent over Mary's hand in greeting. She always felt as if she were acting in some mid-Victorian drama when Martin entered upon the scene, which before had been a very modern and efficient business office.

"What's new?" he asked, while his eyes—that were slightly too close together on either side of his sharp nose and gave him the shrewd, cruel look of a fox—appraised her.

"Market's pretty steady," she replied with impersonal friendliness. "Anaconda Copper lost a point. But Mr. Foster wanted to see you about a new company we are underwriting. He thinks you will be interested in a big block. It would pay you to switch some stocks, even. Mr. Foster will see you presently."

"It makes no difference to me how long I have to wait for Foster, so long as you will entertain me," she smiled, as if he really believed that some day she would relent, and be more than nice to him.

"I'm not a very good hostess these days, what with being up to my eyebrows in work for the last two months. The lawyers have been practically camped here with Mr. Foster, and he has formed a big syndicate on this new project. You will do well to get in on the ground floor, Mr. Frazier."

"Why not drop the formalities—Mary? That's a sweet name. Pity you exactly. Haven't we known each other long enough to forget the conventional handshakes? Allow about a little dinner tonight—any place you say?"

"Thanks a lot, Mr. Frazier, but I've been working overtime so much that I just must get home and rest tonight. The worst of this grind isn't over yet, you know. The issue on this new stock comes out in two weeks and it gets worse as we go along," she smiled pleasantly, with just a suggestion of regret which she had learned to assume for certain occasions, in diplomatic self-defense. She was grateful for the buzz of the telephone just then, for it was Foster asking Frazier to come in.

Mary shrugged relief when he had gone and closed the door. She turned briskly to her work. So much to do and so little time to do it. Incessant ringing of the telephone; customers asking prices on stocks, more as market closing time approached—three o'clock. Usually, the last hour of the day was the only one left for concentrated and uninterrupted office work.

Appointments, letters, telephone

"What's Foster got to do with it? He would never know it from me. I'll give you my word to keep it absolutely quiet."

"That still wouldn't make it honest. Besides, as I said, I can't afford to risk a dollar in stock now."

"Let me advance you the down payment. You know yourself that you would be sure to win. I don't know how you can turn down an offer like that."

"No, you wouldn't know, Mr. Frazier," she said quietly, meeting his eyes squarely.

"Well," he shrugged, drawing on his immaculate gloves and shifting his gaze to his hands. "The offer stands—now or any time. Good-bye, Mary."

calls—all a tense and hectic confusion. Every broker's office was a part of the axis on which the big business of the world revolved, and you were caught in the strenuous vortex every minute of the working hours. This business of seeing people frantically lose fortunes or jubilantly make them in split seconds, was no tranquil life. But Mary loved it. Vaguely remote in her mind were plans for the future—perhaps her own office, a woman's broker; at least, manager of a woman's department with some firm. She might even suggest it to Frances some day when she knew all the ropes well enough to be confident.

That is, if she didn't get the home and babies. She thought of Dick—coming home evenings to them, and then reprimanded herself for daring such thoughts. After all, she must not let imagination carry her too far. She had known Dick for only a month, she thought ruefully, a flimsy shamefacedly. Where had all her conservatism gone, anyway? What was that maxim about when love flew in at the window—well, she supposed that common sense flew out.

Her thoughts had been running thus in a sort of light and joyous obligato to the heavier major chords of her duties as she worked. Both were suddenly interrupted by Frazier's entrance from the inner office. He started her by coming directly to her and, placing one hand on the back of her chair, bent over her with an intimate air.

"That was a great tip, little girl. I'm taking a thousand at fifty. I ought to double in a month. Are you going in, too?"

Mary drew away from his nearness, rigidly and laughed with embarrassment. "Oh, no, Mr. Frazier, I haven't the cash to invest and employees can't buy on margin, you know."

"Sure, I know. That's just what I had in mind. Let me buy you a block in my name, and you can pay me from the profits. That's what friends are for, isn't it?"

Mary drew away from his nearness, rigidly and laughed with embarrassment. "Oh, no, Mr. Frazier, I haven't the cash to invest and employees can't buy on margin, you know."

"What's Foster got to do with it? He would never know it from me. I'll give you my word to keep it absolutely quiet."

"No, you wouldn't know, Mr. Frazier," she said quietly, meeting his eyes squarely.

The Theater

"They can't even begin to suggest the psychology of 'An American Tragedy' in a motion picture of ordinary length." Thus Theodore Dreiser frames money borrowed from Fifi and is chief objection to the scenario at Paramount has drawn up from the most famous novel. Since arriving in Hollywood, the novelist has dodged all interviews, even the place of his residence secret.

He has disagreed with Paramount, however, over the picture set Von Sternberg is directing of great story. "My objections to scenario were the sole purpose my coming to California," he limits. "You simply can't tell the book in the limited treatment they have given it. I have stated my objections, and they have been very courteous—they know how these things are."

The author says an earlier scenario, prepared by S. M. Eisenstein, Russian director, met with his approval but it called for many more reels. Phillips Holmes does very well in that part of the picture which Dreiser has seen, he declares, but he favors the work of Morgan Fairley in the stage version and even of Leslie Fenton, who appeared in that role on the Pacific Coast.

Of Von Sternberg, the novelist merely remarks that he might have been more polite.

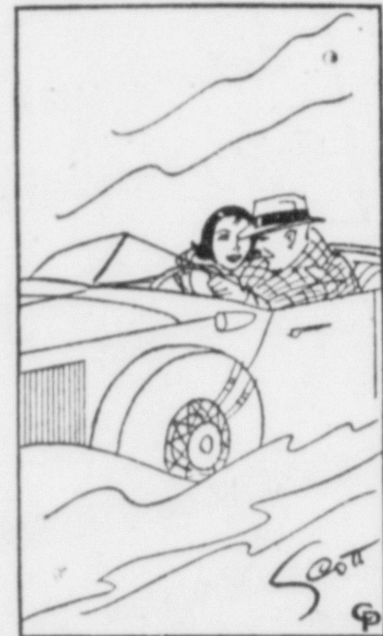

The word is out that Lilyan Tashman will play opposite George Bancroft in his next talkie, "The Money King." It is hard to imagine two more different people than the sleek, sophisticated Lilyan and the vigorous, boasting Bancroft. But as they are supposed to be just as different in the story, it will be all right. It is Lilyan's first lead since she signed her new contract with Paramount. Thwarted for four years in attempts to get a European vacation, the new contract allows time off for such a trip this summer.

Fifi D'Orsay is engaged to a mysterious someone. She says she loves him because she always takes him back after a battle. Her brother, Roger Lussier, is working in the Fox studio laboratory. He bought a used car with

NASH Quality Bodies for Quality Cars
NASH employs the most advanced principle of steel, wood and composite construction—the same kind of construction used in bodies for the highest priced cars. Interiors are tailored in quality mohairs, whipcords, broadcloths or genuine leather. Seat springs are exceptionally deep and restful, while arm rests are so built as to afford unusual comfort. Interior and exterior hardware is executed in chaste design, complementing the body design as a whole. Insulation against heat in summer and cold in winter is of course provided. For a new conception of modern motoring, accept a demonstration of any Nash model—but don't permit its remarkable performance to overshadow the equally notable excellence of its body. Drive in—soon.
